As I Walked Out One Evening Poem by WH Auden - Poem Hunter

As I walked out one evening. By mentioning the evening makes clear it is the passing and end of the day. This creates a fatality that time is up. There is the use of modern context but there is also archaic diction, Bristol Street. Therefore, time is vague. Auden compares the crowds to fields of harvest wheat.

After sunset...I walked out into the desert... Light was thinning; the scrub's dry savory odors were sweet on the cooler air. In this, the first pleasant moment for a walk after long blazing hours, I thought I was the only thing abroad. Abruptly I stopped short. The other lay rigid, as suddenly arrested, his body undulant; the head was not drawn
