In linguistic morphology and information retrieval, stemming is the process of reducing inflected (or sometimes derived) words to their word stem, base or root form—generally a written word form. The stem need not be identical to the morphological root of the word; it is usually sufficient that related words map to the same stem, even if this stem is not in itself a valid root.

Text segmentation is the process of dividing written text into meaningful units, such as words, sentences, or topics. The term applies both to mental processes used by humans when reading text, and to artificial processes implemented in computers, which are the subject of natural language processing. The problem is non-trivial, because while some written languages have explicit word boundary ...

Introduction. Hibernation in mammals is a seasonal state of metabolic suppression and dormancy characterized by a decrease in body temperature (Andrews, 2007, Barnes, 1989, Carey et al., 2003, Geiser, 2004). Small hibernators such as 13-lined ground squirrels (GS; Ictidomys tridecemlineatus) use this remarkable strategy to survive extreme environmental stresses (Drew et al., 2007, Staples, 2016 ...

INTRODUCTION. The knee is a diarthrodial joint formed by two joint surfaces: the tibiofemoral and patellofemoral surfaces. The medial and lateral tibiofemoral compartments, together with the patellofemoral joint, form the three compartment of the knee, and these are covered by hyaline joint cartilage (1).. Hyaline joint cartilage is a kind of dense conjunctive tissue consisting of cells, water ...
