Interior Gateway Routing Protocol (IGRP) is a distance vector interior gateway protocol (IGP) developed by Cisco. It is used by routers to exchange routing data within an autonomous system. IGRP is a proprietary protocol. IGRP was created in part to overcome the limitations of RIP (maximum hop count of only 15, and a single routing metric) when used within large networks.

The Routing Information Protocol ('RIP') is one of the oldest distance-vector routing protocols which employ the hop count as a routing metric. RIP prevents routing loops by implementing a limit on the number of hops allowed in a path from source to destination. The largest number of hops allowed for RIP is 15, which limits the size of networks that RIP can support.

De transportlaag is de vierde laag uit het OSI-model, dat zorgt voor het transport van data voor de applicaties. De meest gebruikte protocollen uit deze laag zijn het Transmission Control Protocol (TCP) en het User Datagram Protocol (UDP), data-eenheden uit deze laag worden meestal segmenten (of datagrammen in het geval van UDP) genoemd.
